

AI Essay Evaluation Report

Original Essay:

I can?t tell you in which peer group I?d fit best because I?m a social chameleon and am comfortable in most; I will instead describe my own social situation and the various cliques I drift in and out of.

My high school?s student body is from a part of town that is much more diverse than the rest of the city, and the city as a whole is more diverse than most of the state. The location of my school, only a few blocks from the University of Oregon , is greatly responsible for the social atmosphere. Whereas the other high schools in town draw mainly from middle-class white suburban families, mine sits in the division between the poor west university neighborhood and the affluent east university one. East university is hilly and forested with quiet residential streets and peaceful, large houses. A few blocks west, using the university as the divider, the houses become small and seedy. On the west side of my school there are many dirty apartments; crime is high and social status is low.

The result is the presence of two very distinct social scenes in the school itself. What is ironic although not crucial to this essay is that the school, a squat, gray-stained concrete sprawl, is divided right through the middle, just as its surrounding neighborhood is. The west wing ends in a gym, a symbol of lower-class recreation, and low aspiration, while the east wing holds the auditorium, the stronghold of sophistication, highbrow musical and theatrical achievement. On the east side are artsy wall murals, on the west side only graffiti.

Source: <https://www.essayedge.com/blog/jump-right-in-essay>

Corrected Essay:

I can?t tell you in which peer group I?d fit best because I?m a social chameleon and am comfortable in most; I will instead describe my own social situation and the various cliques I drift in and out of.

My high school?s student body is from a part of town that is much more diverse than the rest of the city, and the city as a whole is more diverse than most of the state. The location of my school, only a few blocks from the University of Oregon, is greatly responsible for the social atmosphere. Whereas the other high schools in town draw mainly from middle-class white suburban families, mine sits in the division between the poor west university neighborhood and the affluent east university one. East university is hilly and forested with quiet residential streets and peaceful, large houses. A few blocks west, using the university as the divider, the houses become small and seedy. On the west side of my school, there are many dirty apartments; crime is high and social status is low.

The result is the presence of two very distinct social scenes in the school itself. What is ironic, although not crucial to this essay, is that the school, a squat, gray-stained concrete sprawl, is divided right through the middle, just as its surrounding neighborhood is. The west wing ends in a gym, a symbol of lower-class recreation and low aspiration, while the east wing holds the auditorium, the stronghold of sophistication and highbrow musical and theatrical achievement. On the east side are artsy wall murals, while on the west side, there is only graffiti.

Scores:

Grammar: 8/10

Vocabulary: 8/10

Coherence: 7/10

Structure: 7/10

Overall: 7.5/10

Teaching Mode Explanation:

["Corrected a missing comma after 'University of Oregon'.", "Inserted a comma after 'west side of my school' for better sentence clarity.", "Placed a comma after 'ironic' to separate clauses.", "Added a comma before 'although not crucial to this essay' for grammatical accuracy.", "Replaced 'low aspiration' with 'and low aspiration' to maintain parallel structure.", "Changed 'only graffiti' to 'there is only graffiti' for grammatical correctness and clarity."]